DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claims 1,3-16 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. The limitation "without a protease enzyme" is new matter. There is no express support for this limitation. The fact that the specification states that protease can be used does not support the express exclusion of the protease.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1, 3-16 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b or e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Kawamura et al. US 6,344,499 or Galimberti et al. US 2003/0109625.

6. Claims 1, 3-10, 12-16 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Ichikawa et al. US 2004/0014876.

7. The rejections set forth under 35 USC 102/103 in the paper mailed 4/7/08 are deemed proper and are herein repeated.

8. The newly amended claims, declaration and remarks filed in support thereof have been fully considered but have been found not persuasive.

9. Applicants extensively argue that the protease is excluded from the claims and required by the cited art. This is not persuasive. It is questionable just how the protease is excluded, see new matter rejection. Further, it is prima facie obvious to leave out a known ingredient and lose its known function. The protease is disclosed as being used to deproteinize the rubber. Applicants have failed to show or allege any unexpected results when protease is used compared to when it is not.

10. The art shows the claimed enzymes. It is reasonable to presume that these exert the action upon the glucans as claimed. Applicants have to show or allege that such is not the case. The fact that these can be used in combination with the protease is not germane to the patentability.

11. Applicants argue that the system of Galimberti is different because the hydrophilic polymers are destructured starch and the amount of enzyme would be small compared to the protease or starch. This is not persuasive. There are no amount limitations in the claims that are seen to patentably distinguish the claims from the art. Applicants have failed to specifically identify any such distinguishing limitations.

12. The declaration has been fully considered but fails to rebut the prima facie case of obviousness set forth herein. It is alleged that the declaration shows that the glucans are decomposed by the enzyme treatment. While such may be the case, this does not render the claims patentable. There remains no comparative showing that supports the breadth of the claims and represents the closest prior art. The fact that the enzyme decompose the glucans is not dispositive. It is reasonable to presume that enzyme treatment in the prior art decomposes the glucans as well.
